How do filmmakers and playwrights reinterpret classic novels for the modern viewer? Through examples from Spanish cinema and theater, Linda Willem will examine the growing tendency in 21st-century adaptations to use original sources not as models to be faithfully followed, but as raw material to be reworked and transformed into something radically new and different.