Meggin McIntosh, PhD, also known as “The PhD of Productivity™,” is a former teacher, university professor, and director of her university’s Excellence in Teaching Program. She is highly regarded for offering practical strategies and structures for academics – with humor and integrity. Her CV is over 150 pages so she must have figured out something about getting writing projects – and much more – planned and completed. Join us in March for this straightforward and helpful workshop; learn and laugh with colleagues from around campus.

Registration Information: All Butler University faculty and graduate students may register by contacting: facultyfellow@butler.edu. Lunch will be provided for all registrants, too!

Space is limited so please reserve your spot and block your calendar now!